Introduction

Proponents 5420 Sunset Boulevard LP, LLC, are preparing an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) on behalf of the City of Los Angeles for the proposed 5420 Sunset Project (the Project) in Hollywood, city of Los Angeles, Los Angeles County, California (Figure 1). Under contract with Armbruster Goldsmith & Delvac, representatives of the proponents, Statistical Research, Inc. (SRI), has conducted a tribal cultural resource study to assess the potential impact of the Project on any tribal cultural resources that might be present on the property. This report presents our methods and documents the results of archival research, a literature review, SRI's Native American contact program, and data from formal Native American consultation conducted by the City of Los Angeles.

The Project will redevelop an entire commercial block bounded by West Sunset Boulevard to the north, an alleyway to the south, North Western Avenue to the west, and North Serrano Avenue to the east (Figure 2). The Project is located at 5420, 5422, and 5450 West Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, California, in the city of Los Angeles, Assessor's Parcel Nos. 5544-032-018 and 5544-032-017. The 6.75-acre (2.7-ha) property currently supports a Food-4-Less grocery store, a McDonald's restaurant, and an at-grade, paved parking lot. The Los Angeles county assessor identifies the parcels as commercial/industrial and lists the construction dates of the standing buildings between 1971 and 1989.

Project Description

The proposed mixed-use development Project will consist of 735 multifamily residential units above approximately 95,820 square feet (8,902 m²) of neighborhood-serving commercial space. The proposed project will replace the existing site edifices with 4 six- to seven-story buildings up to 75 feet (23 m) in height, as well as 2 subterranean parking levels. In total, the project will provide 1,463 vehicle parking spaces and 386 bicycle parking spaces. The ground floor of all structures will support market/retail spaces, residential lobbies and leasing offices, pools, spas, and other recreational facilities. Upper floors will contain multifamily residential units. The project will also provide approximately 79,955 square feet (7,428 m²) of open space in the form of landscaped courtyards, a north-south pedestrian paseo, and a paved plaza along Sunset Boulevard. Excavation depths of up to 25 feet (7.6 m) below grade are expected during construction. SRI's study considered the potential impacts of the proposed subterranean parking structure, mixed-use towers, and other planned facilities within the Project footprint.

Applicable Regulations

The Project is subject to the provisions of Assembly Bill (AB) 52, which amends the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) (PRC § 21080.3.1) to require lead agencies to consult with California Native American tribes and to consider the effects of a project on tribal cultural resources. The proposed Project is considered a "project" under CEQA and is subject to compliance with CEQA (Public Resources Code [PRC] § 21000 et seq.) and CEQA guidelines (California Code of Regulations § 15000 et seq.), as amended to date. The City of Los Angeles is the CEQA lead agency for the Project. CEQA mandates that lead agencies consider whether a proposed project will have an adverse effect on the environment and whether any such effect can be feasibly eliminated by pursuing an alternative course of action or can be mitigated to less-than-significant levels.

As amended by AB 52, CEQA recognizes that tribal cultural resources are a particular type of cultural or historical resource, which form part of the environment. The law recognizes that California Native American tribes have special expertise with regard to their tribal history and practices and that, therefore, affiliated tribal representatives should be consulted for environmental assessments to identify resources of significance to the tribes. AB 52, Section 1(a)(9), also states that “a substantial adverse change to a tribal cultural resource has a significant effect on the environment.”

Formal, government-to-government tribal consultation pursuant to CEQA, as amended by AB 52, was conducted by the City of Los Angeles. The original research conducted for this assessment is presented to provide context for the City of Los Angeles’ consultation efforts to respond to the new CEQA requirement for an assessment of tribal cultural resources. As defined in PRC § 21074 and further refined in CEQA Appendix G: Environmental Checklist Form, a tribal cultural resource is either a site, feature, place, cultural landscape that is geographically defined in terms of the size and scope of the landscape, sacred place, or object with cultural value to a California Native American tribe, and that is:

- a) Listed or eligible for listing in the California Register of Historical Resources, or in a local register of historical resources as defined in Public Resources Code section 5020.1(k), or
- b) A resource determined by the lead agency, in its discretion and supported by substantial evidence, to be significant pursuant to criteria set forth in subdivision (c) of PRC Section 5024.1. In applying the criteria set forth in subdivision (c) of PRC 5024.1, the lead agency shall consider the significance of the resource to a California Native American tribe.

Project Personnel and Qualifications

The following SRI staff performed the research and analysis reported in this document. Angela H. Keller, Ph.D., is a Registered Professional Archaeologist (RPA) specializing in California archaeology. She meets the Secretary of the Interior’s Historic Preservation Professional Qualification Standards for archaeology. Local historical information was compiled by Scott Thompson, M.A., who meets the Secretary of the Interior’s Historic Preservation Professional Qualification Standards for history and architectural history.

Setting

The city of Los Angeles is a sprawling, 500-square-mile (1,295-km²) municipality in southern California encompassing portions of the San Fernando Valley, the Los Angeles Basin, and a corridor connecting to the Port of Los Angeles in San Pedro. Several independent cities and unincorporated sections of Los Angeles County are located within the larger boundaries of the city of Los Angeles, including the cities of Santa Monica, Culver City, and Beverly Hills. The Project site is located roughly 4.5 miles (7.25 km) northwest of downtown Los Angeles in the Hollywood neighborhood. Recently, the densely populated community around the Project site has been given the name “Little Armenia.”

The Project parcel is located on the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) 7.5-minute Hollywood, California, topographic quadrangle (see Figure 2), at an elevation of approximately 360 feet (110 m) above mean sea level. In the vicinity of the Project, the modern land surface slopes gently down toward the south and west. The current California Geological Survey geologic map of the region (Campbell et al. 2014) shows the Project resting on alluvial deposits dating to the late Pleistocene (ca. 126,000–12,000 years ago; Figure 3). These typically fine and unconsolidated deposits are underlain, at some depth, by Monterey Shale formations of marine origin that date to the Miocene (ca. 23 million to 5 million years ago). A geotechnical investigation conducted for the Project (Geotechnologies, Inc. 2016) found that the property is covered by 3–6 feet (0.9–1.8 m) of fill overlying the natural alluvium. Borings achieved depths of 35–65 feet (10.7–19.8 m), and none reached the base of the alluvial deposits.

Los Angeles has a long cultural history that includes Native American groups, Spanish explorers and settlers, other Euroamericans, Mexicans, and Americans. The prehistory and history of the Los Angeles area are briefly summarized in the Culture History: Prehistoric, Protohistoric, and Early Historical Period and Culture History: Historical Period sections, below. Details of historical-period land use within the Project area are also presented below, in the History of the Project Parcel section. Additional details are available in Historic Resources Survey: Hollywood Redevelopment Project Area (Chattel et al. 2010) and Los Angeles Citywide Historic Context Statement: Pre-Consolidation Communities of Los Angeles, 1862–1932 (Prosser 2016a).

Culture History: Prehistoric, Protohistoric, and Early Historical Periods

This section is an overview of the prehistoric period through the early historical period in the greater Los Angeles Basin area and provides information about the main Native American group in the vicinity, the Gabrielino/Tongva.

Paleoindian Period

Roughly 12,000 years ago, southern California was populated by several related yet distinct cultural groups, generally known as Paleoindians (Moratto 2004:76). Along the coast, these cultures are known as the Paleo-coastal tradition and are believed to have migrated down the coast from northern California. The people of the Paleo-coastal tradition are thought to have been the first to arrive in California (Erlandson et al. 2007), and the tradition is well documented along the coast of central California and on the northern Channel Islands (Erlandson et al. 2007). People of the Paleo-coastal tradition were maritime adapted and collected shellfish, hunted marine and land mammals and birds, and caught smaller fishes (Moratto 2004:78). The Paleoindians living farther inland are known as Clovis (from the original sites excavated near Clovis, New Mexico, in the early twentieth century) and were adapted to a terrestrial and lacustrine environment, using a very different subsistence technology from that of the Paleo-coastal people. Inland Paleoindian sites generally date to the same time as Paleo-coastal sites. Major Clovis localities are known at Lake Tulare (Moratto 2004:76, 78; Riddell and Olsen 1969) and China Lake (Davis 1975), among other locations in central and southern California.

Although there are many regional variants to these groups, Paleoindians can be characterized by a few general traits (Moratto 2004:76, 78):

1. Paleoindians inhabited interior sites along ancient lake and marsh shorelines and coastal sites along stream channels and estuaries.
2. Paleoindians had a sophisticated lithic technology with advanced tool-making techniques for the creation of large flaked stone tools, especially large foliate points and lanceolate fluted points.
3. Ground stone tools were not used, and groups made use of the atlatl and dart.
4. Paleoindians were primarily nomadic or systematically followed seasonal resources as those became available. Some groups, however, may have been more sedentary, if the resources in the area were adequate for permanent settlements.

Millingstone Period

The Millingstone period—sometimes referred to as the Early period—is a roughly 5,500-year span beginning ca. 6500 cal B.C. and ending with the first dramatic increase in regional human population ca. 1000 cal B.C. (the “cal” prefix indicates that these dates are derived from calibrated radiocarbon dates). During this period (called a “horizon” in some chronological schemes), milling implements (especially manos and metates), scraper planes, choppers, and core tools were abundant and there was a dearth of projectile points

(in this case, dart points and spears) and faunal remains. Inherent in the definition of the Millingstone period is a heavy dependence on seeds and a minor emphasis on hunting (hence the abundance of milling implements and the near absence of hunting equipment and faunal remains).

Sutton (2009) has argued that, at the end of the Millingstone period (ca. 1500 cal B.C.), through the early Intermediate period (ending ca. A.D. 500), there was an initial entry of the Takic (proto-Gabrielino/Cupan branch of the Uto-Aztecan language family) speakers into the region. These Takic groups appear to have replaced the existing late Millingstone groups along the coast. The archaeological record reflects this major change. First, ancestral DNA and osteometric (bone morphology and measurement) studies of the small number of skeletal remains available from this period indicate that the entering Takic groups were biologically distinct from the preceding populations, suggesting that a migration took place (for a full discussion, see Sutton [2009]). Second, significant increases in the number of sites were noted in some areas, suggesting the arrival of incoming groups during the early Intermediate period, earlier than has been traditionally thought. Also, larger sites with greater diversities of artifacts appeared at about that time but seem to have been occupied seasonally. Last, there were some changes in mortuary patterns on the coast. Flexed burials under cairns, a common burial practice throughout the Millingstone period, disappeared from the coast but continued inland; cremation was uncommon and was not a marker of the early Takic expansion, as is commonly believed (see Sutton 2009). Large mourning features with cremated human bone appeared ca. 600 cal B.C. (during the early Intermediate period). These features apparently represent a diffusion of ideas from Yuman groups in the deserts to the east and could mark the inauguration of some sort of ritual complex in the region.

Intermediate Period

The Intermediate period (1000 cal B.C.–cal A.D. 1000) is marked by changes in settlement patterns, economic activities, mortuary practices, and technology. The latter portion of the Intermediate period (ca. A.D. 500–1000) is marked by the spread of the bow-and-arrow to the coast from the north and east. Sometime toward the end of the Intermediate period, the trade in obsidian mined in the Coso formation decreased dramatically (Sutton et al. 2007:244), and Obsidian Butte obsidian increased in importance. Yuman ceramics, plus some local wares, were present. Major settlements continued to be occupied seasonally. Flexed burials continued, and cremation remained uncommon. As discussed above, Sutton (2009) argued that a major process beginning in the late Intermediate period was the diffusion of a Takic language, the mother of the Cupan languages, into Yuman-speaking areas located immediately to the south of the Los Angeles Basin.

Late Period

The Late period, beginning ca. cal A.D. 1000 and ending with European contact in A.D. 1542, witnessed extensive population growth along much of the southern California coast. There are more sites and a greater variety of sites with greater internal differentiation from this period than from any other time in prehistory. Villages with complex site layouts and burial grounds with highly variable mortuary treatments appeared, suggesting the development of social differentiation (Douglass et al. 2016:44).

Protohistoric and Early Historical Periods

The line between the Late and Protohistoric periods is admittedly arbitrary. The Protohistoric period in the Los Angeles Basin begins with initial European contact in A.D. 1542 and ends with the establishment of Mission San Gabriel Arcángel in 1771, after which direct and recurrent contact between the Gabrielino and the Spanish settlers in the Los Angeles Basin was established (King 1978). The early historical period (also known as the Mission period) runs from 1771 until the beginning of the era of secularization in 1834.

The Protohistoric period is possibly the least-well-documented period in the southern California occupational sequence. A distinct time bias against remains from this period is evident in the work of some early archaeologists who excavated in pursuit of the very earliest (Paleoindian) deposits and disregarded later components. In addition, if sites were multicomponent and were occupied during the Protohistoric period as well as either the Late or the Mission period, the Protohistoric period component may have been difficult to identify and distinguish from components of other periods.

The Gabrielino (Tongva/Kizh)

The Project is located within the ethnographic territory of the Gabrielino, who occupied much of present-day Orange and Los Angeles Counties as well as Santa Catalina, San Clemente, and San Nicolas Islands and portions of Riverside and San Bernardino Counties (Blackburn 1963; Johnston 1962; Kroeber 1925; McCawley 1996). Their territory included “the watersheds of the Los Angeles, San Gabriel, and Santa Ana rivers, several smaller intermittent streams in the Santa Monica and Santa Ana Mountains, all of the Los Angeles Basin, [and] the coast from Aliso Creek to Topanga Creek in the north” (Bean and Smith 1978:538). As previously mentioned, early ancestors of the Gabrielino probably arrived in coastal southern California at the end of the Millingstone period (ca. 1500 B.C.) with the initial entry of Takic-language speakers into the region.

The Gabrielino people were so named by the Spanish because many of the tribe’s members were baptized and converted at Mission San Gabriel Arcángel. According to Mr. Robert Dorame (personal communication 2018), chairman of the Gabrielino Tongva Indians of California Tribal Council, his ancestors chose to spell their name “Gabrielino,” rather than the typical Spanish form “Gabrieleño,” as a form of resistance to Spanish control. Historical accounts suggest that the people known as the Gabrielino did not have a singular name for themselves, although many records indicate that individuals referred to themselves as coming from or being affiliated with specific villages (Bryant Dakin 1939:222; Johnston 1962:10) rather than as part of a larger linguistic or cultural group. Researchers have identified the names Tongva and Kizh as possible Native names synonymous with Gabrielino (Hale 1846; Harrington 1933; Heizer 1968; Merriam 1955), though neither is considered a perfect fit. Today, the names Gabrielino, Gabrieleño, Tongva, and Kizh are used variously by descendant groups to identify themselves and their heritage.

The Gabrielino generally lived in permanent villages (Bean and Smith 1978:538–539), but the location and size of villages varied across environmental zones. Gabrielino villages (sometimes also called rancherías) generally maintained their own territories and were located in defensible locations adjacent to subsistence resources and water (Beals and Hester 1974; Bean and Shipek 1978). Coastal Gabrielino villages often contained more than 200 residents, and their houses could hold as many as 50 people (Bean and Smith 1978:542; Costansó 1911; Johnston 1962). At the time of European contact, the Gabrielino occupied at least 50–100 villages (with an average population of 50–100 per village), for an estimated total population of roughly 5,000 people (Bean and Smith 1978:540; Kroeber 1925).

Gabrielino villages were often composed of several lineages, each with its own leader (Bean and Smith 1978:543–544). Each village had a hereditary chief who was the leader of the village’s dominant (or only) lineage (Bean and Smith 1978:544; Boscana 1933:43). The chief acted as both religious and political leader and was responsible for conducting ceremonial affairs, determining where and when to hunt and gather, collecting goods for communal use, arbitrating disputes, and leading war parties. The chief had a key assistant, who counseled him on ceremonial matters, organized rituals, and ensured that proper protocol was followed (Bean and Smith 1978:544). Gabrielino chiefs were also assisted by a treasurer, an announcer, a general assistant, and several messengers (Bean and Smith 1978:544).

Houses were typically dome-shaped, thatched structures set over shallow depressions (Bean and Smith 1978:542; Costansó 1911; Johnston 1962). Superstructures were constructed with reeds and brush and were often covered with earth. Houses ranged in diameter from 15 to 60 feet, depending on the number of people living inside. They were used primarily for sleeping and storage, as most daily activities took place outdoors around the house or in the shade of a ramada (an unwallled, roofed space). All villages also contained a sweathouse, which served as a gathering place (Bean and Smith 1978:542). Sweathouses were constructed in the same manner used for houses but typically were smaller and oval. For public ceremonial activities, the Gabrielino used an open-air, fenced enclosure (Bean and Smith 1978:542).

At the time of contact, Gabrielino subsistence was based on foraging. Agriculture was not practiced, although the Gabrielino probably burned native vegetation to enhance the productivity of edible wild plants (Anderson 2013). Acorns provided a staple of the diet for the Gabrielino. Seeds, greens, roots, bulbs, fruits, berries, flowers, and fungi supplemented the plant-food diet for all groups (Bean and Smith 1978). Deer, pronghorn, rabbit, small rodents, and birds were available throughout much of Gabrielino territory (Bean and Smith 1978:538–539). Waterfowl were taken by the Gabrielino in marshes near the coast. Sharks, rays, other fishes, sea mammals, and shellfish were available on the coast, and tuna and swordfish could be accessed by boat in offshore waters.

Large game was hunted primarily with bow-and-arrow, whereas small game was taken with curved, flat sticks; snares; traps; and deadfalls. Fishing employed hooks, gorges, nets, basketry traps, spears, and bow-and-arrow (Bean and Smith 1978:546). The Gabrielino used bedrock mortars to pound acorns in places with suitable bedrock outcroppings (Bean and Smith 1978:542; Kroeber 1925:631–632). Where bedrock was not available, portable stone mortars and pestles were used. Hoppers were used on new, shallow mortars until they became deep enough (Kroeber 1925:653, 696–697). Smaller grass seeds were collected with basketry seed beaters and were processed with metates and manos.

Like most Native Californian groups, the Gabrielino made a wide variety of utilitarian, ceremonial, and decorative basketry. Small handheld baskets were used for gathering berries and bird eggs; large, round-bottomed baskets for carrying bulkier items; shallow trays for winnowing or parching seeds; large baskets for storage; and globular, flat-bottomed baskets for keeping utensils and trinkets (Bean and Smith 1978:542). The Gabrielino also made water jugs coated with asphaltum and urn-shaped ceremonial baskets for grave offerings (Bean and Smith 1978:542; Blackburn 1963; Kroeber 1925:629; Merriam 1955:84).

The Gabrielino did not use pottery until just before the arrival of the Spanish (Kroeber 1925:628), but they did have access to steatite (heat-treated soapstone) from Santa Catalina Island, which they used to create cooking and serving vessels (Kroeber 1925:629). In addition to utilitarian items, the Gabrielino carved pipes, ornaments, animal figurines, and ceremonial bowls out of steatite (Bean and Smith 1978:542; Blackburn 1963; Kroeber 1925:629). The Gabrielino also made needles, awls, scrapers, and flakers from bone or shell; projectile points, scrapers, drills, and knives from stone; and saws from deer scapulae (Bean and Smith 1978:542).

The Gabrielino were avid traders and exchanged food, utilitarian items, and ceremonial items among themselves and with their neighbors. Generally, obsidian, furs, hides, nuts, and seeds moved west, whereas shell beads, tourmaline, steatite, asphaltum, sea otter pelts, and dried fish moved east. The Cocomaricopa Trail connected southern California with the present-day U.S. Southwest, bringing turquoise, southwestern pottery, grooved axes, and agricultural products to the region. In turn, Gabrielino shells and steatite traveled as far east as central Arizona (Bean and Smith 1978:547). The Gabrielino conducted trade with their coastal neighbors by boat but otherwise did not travel into the territories of others to trade (Bean and Smith 1978:545, 547; Kroeber 1925:629). Olivella shell beads were used as a general medium of exchange throughout the region, but barter was also common (Bean and Smith 1978:547; Kroeber 1925:630). Clam-shell disk beads replaced Olivella shell beads as the standard currency for the Gabrielino during the historical period (Kroeber 1925:630).

By 1800, most of the surviving Gabrielino had become missionized, although many had died from violence, imported illness (e.g., smallpox), or illness associated with the poor living conditions at the missions (e.g., tuberculosis and dysentery). Those who did not submit to the mission system fled the area to live in remote refuges or to work on secular ranches and farms (Bean and Smith 1978:Table 1; Walker and Johnson 1992:127). All Native American groups experienced dramatic population decline and loss of traditional territory as a result of colonization, but the effects were particularly dramatic among the Gabrielino, who were considered essentially wiped out by the turn of the last century. In an 1890 report on the “Mission Indians in the Counties of San Diego and Los Angeles, California,” the Gabrielino are not mentioned at all, even in the section discussing “Mission Indians Off Reservation” (Foote 1894:214). Although many Gabrielino descendants and tribal organizations survive today, the Gabrielino have never been officially recognized or allotted tribal reservation lands by the U.S. government.

Culture History: Historical Period

The region encompassing the Project area came under the control of the Spanish mission system in 1771, with the establishment of Mission San Gabriel Arcángel (Beck and Haase 1974:19). The mission claimed vast acreages in support of its livestock and grain fields (Connell 1941:32; Shipman 1983:21).

In the late eighteenth century, the Spanish governor of Alta California was given authority to make land grants to allow settlement outside the missions and pueblos. Much of present-day Hollywood occupies land that was part of two former land grants. Around 1795, Rancho Los Feliz (also Felis) was granted to José Vicente Feliz, a veteran of the Anza expedition of 1775–1776 that brought settlers to Alta California. Encompassing approximately 7,000 acres (2,833 ha), the rancho extended from present-day Gower Street on the west to the Los Angeles River on the east. In 1828, during the Mexican period of occupation, Rancho La Brea was granted to Antonio José Rocha and Nemisio Domínguez. The approximately 4,500-acre (1,820-ha) grant constitutes the west half of present-day Hollywood (Chattel et al. 2010:16; Prosser 2016b:21).

Beginning in the 1860s, Anglo-American settlers developed individual tracts of land in the area that would become Hollywood. Early landowners, who practiced cattle ranching and dry farming, included John Gower and Colonel Griffith J. Griffith, for whom Griffith Park was named. In 1886, Harvey Wilcox, a land developer from Kansas, acquired a 120-acre (49-ha) parcel in present-day Hollywood. The following year, Wilcox filed a subdivision map with the Los Angeles county recorder. Wilcox named the subdivision Hollywood, which was laid out on an orthogonal grid with rectangular lots. To attract buyers, Wilcox created a broad east–west thoroughfare named Prospect Avenue (now Hollywood Boulevard) and, in 1888, built the Cahuenga Valley Railroad (later the Hollywood and Cahuenga Valley Railroad), a narrow-gauge line that ran from Los Angeles to Hollywood (Figure 4). The Hollywood tracts were sparsely settled through the end of the nineteenth century; development consisted mostly of cultivated fields and orchards with citrus as the signature crop (Chattel et al. 2010:16, 17; Prosser 2016a:57–58).

By the early twentieth century, many farmers were subdividing and selling their land as Hollywood became a mecca for wealthy Midwesterners who preferred the milder California climate. Other subdivisions were established with uniform streets, each lined with a different species of tree. Hollywood was incorporated as a city in 1903, and its character had changed from agricultural to rural residential. By 1909, the population of this rural but wealthy enclave had reached an estimated 4,000. This rapid growth resulted in a need for improved infrastructure as the burgeoning city experienced water shortages, drainage issues, and sewage problems. To solve its infrastructure problems, in January 1910 the citizens of the small independent city voted in favor of annexation to the city of Los Angeles (Chattel et al. 2010:17–18; Prosser 2016a:57, 66, 68).

Although Hollywood marketed itself as a residential suburb of Los Angeles, it soon attracted commercial interests and developed a thriving business district to serve its residents. Nationally, the motion picture industry was flourishing; in 1912, Nestor Films established a studio at Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street in Hollywood. Within 3 months, five other filmmakers—who recognized the benefits of climate, land availability, and favorable economic conditions—established studios in Hollywood. Notable studios included Charlie Chaplin, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century Fox, Pickford Fairbanks, Columbia, and Universal. By the 1930s, most Americans considered Hollywood the center of the motion picture industry and of popular culture. In addition to moviemaking, the entertainment industries of radio broadcasting, television production, and music recording played significant roles in the economic development of Hollywood throughout the twentieth century (Chattel et al. 2010:32, 70, 73, 76, 78, 82; Prosser 2016a:70).

After World War II, the nation experienced unprecedented economic growth. Similarly, Hollywood flourished during the postwar years, and residential and commercial development kept apace. Population and economic growth, as well as the ascendancy of the automobile, necessitated the construction of freeways to facilitate the efficient movement of people and manufactured goods. Construction of U.S. Route 101 (the Hollywood Freeway) began in 1947 and was completed in 1954. Throughout the second half of the twentieth century, dense urban development occurred in response to a rapid increase of population in Hollywood. By 2015, the neighborhood of Hollywood had a population of approximately 88,000 (Chattel et al. 2010:107, 111; StatisticalAtlas.com 2017).

History of the Project Parcel

The following is a narrative of historical-period land use and development in the Project area. This information was assembled based on documents, maps, and photographs provided by the client and collected during archival and background research for the proposed Project.

1771–1795

Mission San Gabriel Arcángel controlled land in the Project area; the Los Angeles River and its tributaries probably provided important resources for the mission. However, no Mission period activity specifically associated with the Project area has been identified.

1795–1887

U.S. General Land Office (GLO) plat maps for Township 1 South, Range 14 West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, dated 1873 and 1881 (GLO 1873, 1881) indicate that the Project area was part of Rancho Los Felis (also Feliz) Lot No. 37, but they do not depict any detail of the Project area (Figure 5). Archival research did not disclose any developments on the Project parcel before subdivision in 1887.

The Los Angeles, California, 15-minute USGS map of the Project area, dated 1894, was drawn from survey data collected in 1893 and 1894. There are no buildings depicted within the Project area; however, there is sparse development in the surrounding vicinity, including a north–south segment of the Hollywood and Cahuenga Valley Railroad that lies less than $\frac{1}{4}$ mile (0.4 km) to the west (see Figure 4). The earliest available Sanborn Fire Insurance Company (Sanborn) map showing the Project area is dated 1919. It shows improvements on the Project parcel associated with the William Fox Sunshine Comedies, Inc., Studio (later Twentieth Century Fox). Buildings and structures included open stages, lumber and props storage areas, shop buildings, wardrobe buildings, dressing rooms, and assorted sets. The Santa Monica, California, 15-minute USGS map dated 1921 was drawn from aerial photographs taken in 1919. Curiously, there are no buildings plotted in the Project area, although the map depicts dense development in the neighborhood of Hollywood.

Aerial photographs dated 1928, 1938, 1948, 1952, 1954, and 1964 show a motion picture studio complex, owned by Twentieth Century Fox, with four large, enclosed sound stages in the south half of the Project parcel. Each is rectangular in plan and oriented north–south. Numerous outbuildings and structures—consisting of a mill, various shops, and storage sheds for props and building materials—lie to the north of the sound stages. Sanborn maps dated 1950, 1955, 1957, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1966, 1968, 1969, and 1970 provide additional detail in terms of the layout and function of the buildings and structures. By 1961, the complex was associated with the television division of Twentieth Century Fox. The Hollywood, California, 7.5-minute USGS maps dated 1953 and 1966 depict similar footprints of the buildings and structures within the studio complex and indicate that the Project parcel was in use by Twentieth Century Fox Studios.

1972–Present

The analysis of land use in the Project area was continued beyond the historical period, in order to determine what modern forces may have had effects on archaeological deposits. The Hollywood, California, 7.5-minute USGS map dated 1972 depicts the grocery-store portion of the present-day commercial building. By 1981, aerial photography indicates a west-side addition to the commercial building. In 1989, the McDonald's restaurant was constructed at the northwest corner of the Project parcel. The parcel remains largely unchanged to the present.

Methods

Archaeological Records Search

SRI conducted a cultural resource records search at the South Central Coastal Information Center (SCCIC), a regional repository of the California Historical Resources Information System (CHRIS). The purpose of the records search was to identify all previously recorded buildings and structures, as well as all previously recorded archaeological resources, and relevant reports for the Project area and a surrounding area within a 1-mile (1.6-km) radius. The reviewed records included all investigation reports and resource records from the following sources: the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), the California Register of Historical Resources (CRHR), California Historical Landmarks (CHL), California Points of Historical Interest (CPHI), the state Historic Resources Inventory (HRI), and Los Angeles Historic-Cultural Monuments.

Ethnohistoric Archival Research

SRI conducted limited archival research focused on identification of tribal cultural resources within and in the vicinity of the Project. Of particular importance was the review of ethnohistoric accounts, ethnohistoric maps of Native American habitation locales and activity, and historical topographic maps. These materials were reviewed to identify previously documented tribal cultural resources (including named villages, use areas, trade and travel routes, archaeological sites, and critical natural features such as springs and streams) in the Project and vicinity. This material was collected to provide a broader context for the assessment of materials developed through tribal contact and consultation.

Tribal Cultural Resources Search and Contact Program

To determine whether previously recorded tribal cultural resources are present in the vicinity of the Project area, SRI requested a Sacred Lands File (SLF) search for the Project parcel from the Native American Heritage Commission (NAHC). The NAHC reviewed their records of traditional-use areas and sacred sites to identify any resources within or near the Project, and they provided a list of Native American contacts culturally affiliated with the Project area who might have further information concerning tribal cultural resources. In their response letter, the NAHC strongly recommended “contacting all those on the list,” so that we might better “respond to claims of failure to consult.” SRI contacted each individual or group on the list provided by the NAHC and supplied them with information about the proposed Project, maps of the Project location, and results from our SCCIC records search. We requested input regarding the presence of tribal cultural resources or other cultural sensitivity in or near the Project. SRI's SLF search and contact program was performed as a standard component of a cultural resources assessment for the Project. SRI's work was conducted separately from the formal tribal consultation undertaken by the City of Los Angeles as the lead agency for this project under CEQA.

City of Los Angeles Native American Consultation

As required under CEQA as amended by AB 52, the City of Los Angeles undertook consultation with California Native American tribes traditionally and culturally affiliated with the Project area who had requested, in writing, to engage in consultation pursuant to PRC Section 21080.3.1. This consultation began with Project notification letters from the City of Los Angeles to affiliated tribes. Interested tribes could respond in writing, via email, or by telephone. Formal consultation entailed direct discussions between Los Angeles Department of City Planning (DCP) staff and designated tribal representatives. Discussions included descriptions from DCP staff of the Project, discussion of specific tribal cultural resources or concerns with regard to the Project, and the collection of comments and source materials from tribal representatives, at their discretion. The results of this consultation effort are described in the Results: City of Los Angeles Native American Consultation section, below.

Results

Archaeological Records Search

A records search at the SCCIC was conducted on August 10, 2017. Within a 1-mile radius of the project footprint, 20 cultural resource investigations have been completed (Figure 6; Table 1). Of these studies, none was performed within the Project boundaries, although 1 (LA-11797) included a general survey of historic properties in the vicinity of the Project. That investigation was conducted for the Community Redevelopment Agency of the City of Los Angeles to support a historic preservation and development plan for the Hollywood Redevelopment Project, which encompasses the Project location. That study identified more than 130 previously unevaluated properties and 8 historic districts as recommended eligible for listing in the CRHR or local registries (Chattel et al. 2010:128). Most of the other investigations were small surveys or records searches associated with the development of cellular facilities, which resulted in no new findings.

The records search identified one historical-period archaeological site within the 1-mile records-search radius and one prehistoric archaeological site slightly more than 1 mile north of the Project. The historical-period site (P-19-003300) was identified during the construction of the Hollywood and Western Metro station in 2003 and was completely removed as part of that construction project (Table 2). The site was a localized trash deposit measuring roughly 2 by 2 feet (0.6 by 0.6 m) in area that was found 2 feet (0.6 m) below the current ground surface, under the south side of Hollywood Boulevard, between Western and Serrano Avenues. The deposit contained building materials probably dating to the 1910s–1920s and including cobblestone rubble, tile, grout, a half brick embossed with “SIM”, and an iron handle embossed with “MDGI/GATES”. The “SIM” brick mark was the maker’s mark of the Simon Brick Company, which was in operation from 1902 to 1945 (Turner and Avalos 2003).

The prehistoric site (CA-LAN-1096) is located in Fern Dell Canyon within Griffith Park and north of Los Feliz Boulevard. The site is described as a “Gabrielino Indian site” with midden deposits. The City of Los Angeles designated CA-LAN-1096 Historic-Cultural Monument No. 112 on February 21, 1973. No other prehistoric archaeological sites have been recorded within 1 mile of the Project.

In all, 321 historical-period built-environment properties have been recorded within 1 mile of the Project footprint, of which only 19 are mapped on the USGS Hollywood 7.5-minute quadrangle map on file at the SCCIC (Figure 7; see Table 2). Of the 19 mapped properties, 9 are single buildings and the remaining 10 are collections of buildings including bungalow courts and city blocks consisting of commercial and residential buildings.

Most of the recorded properties were constructed between the 1910s and the 1940s, reflecting the era of greatest development in this section of Hollywood as a residential community and a hub for the burgeoning film and recording industries. Within 1 mile of the Project footprint, 5 properties are listed in the NRHP and the CRHR: 1721 North Kingsley Bungalow Court (P-19-167727), Dunning House (P-19-167787), Hollywood Palladium (P-19-168084), East Hollywood Boulevard District (P-19-176357), and St. Andrews Bungalow Court (P-19-189999). Dunning House is also listed as City of Los Angeles Historic-Cultural Monument No. 441. Three additional properties have been recommended eligible for listing in the NRHP and the CRHR: Hollywood Hotel (P-19-167767), Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center (P-19-173421), and the 1500–1600 block of North Serrano Avenue (P-19-176338).

The unmapped built-environment properties are listed in the Office of Historic Preservation HRI, relevant portions of which are provided in this report as Appendix A. Most of the HRI-listed properties are identified either as resources not eligible for listing or as contributing members of historic districts eligible for a local listing but not eligible for listing in the NRHP or the CRHR. Five of the properties listed in the HRI, but not mapped on the SCICC map, have been determined eligible for listing in the NRHP through the Section 106 process of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) and are listed in the CRHR: Hollywood Western Building (P-19-167072), built in 1928; Hollywood Walk of Fame (P-19-167544); Hollywood Boulevard Street Lights (P-19-167545), erected in 1920; a commercial building at 5611 Hollywood Boulevard (P-19-167713), built in 1922; and Hollywood Sports Car (P-19-167821), built in 1924. Twelve additional buildings were identified through survey evaluation as appearing eligible for listing as individual properties in the NRHP and the CRHR. These include eight residences, two apartment complexes, and two commercial buildings. No properties within the records-search area are listed in CHL or CPHI.

Ethnohistoric Archival Research

A review of ethnographic sources, including Kroeber's (1925) seminal volume on California Indians, Hugo Reid's first-hand accounts (Bryant Dakin 1939), and Johnston's (1962) and McCawley's (1996) overviews of the Gabrielino, identified named villages in the vicinity of the Project. Although "no traditional names are recalled for the Hollywood area" specifically (Johnston 1962:123), three named Gabrielino/Tongva villages were located within roughly 5 miles (8 km) of the Project. The most important of these was Yanga (also known as Yaanga or Yangna), a large village located in present-day downtown Los Angeles between Union Station and City Hall, and approximately 4.85 miles (7.8 km) southeast of the Project (Johnston 1962:121). Somewhat closer to the Project was the village of Maungna (also known as Mau) in the present-day Elysian Park area and within the current Los Angeles Police Academy grounds, approximately 4 miles (6.4 km) to the east-southeast of the Project. Finally, roughly 4.25 miles (6.85 km) to the northwest of the Project, and on the other side of the Santa Monica Mountains, was the village of Kawengna (also known as Cahuenga or Kawe) in present-day Studio City.

The village of Kawengna was located in the vicinity of Campo de Cahuenga, an NRHP-listed historic site where, more than 170 years ago, critical diplomatic negotiations that eventually resulted in the end of the Mexican-American War took place. At Campo de Cahuenga, Lieutenant Colonel John Frémont, leader of the American forces in California, and Mexican Governor General Andrés Pico signed the Articles of Capitulation in 1847, thereby ending hostilities in California and providing the framework for the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, which formally ended the Mexican-American War in 1848. Most of the terms included in the Articles of Capitulation were crafted by Doña Bernarda Ruíz de Rodríguez, a wealthy town leader in Santa Barbara, who negotiated a generous peace between the Americans and the proud Californios (the original Spanish colonists of California and their descendants) (Walker 1999).

Historical maps showing the probable locations of former Gabrielino villages identify these nearby villages (Figures 8–11). Note the varying village names and locations, which reflect differing source materials used in the creation of these maps. Generally speaking, Gabrielino village place names ended with the suffix -gna, as in Saangna, as reflected in Bernice Johnston's (1962) map (see Figure 8). Alfred Kroeber's (1925) map (see Figure 9) typically omits the suffix (e.g., Saan rather than Saangna). The place names in Chester King's (2004) map (see Figure 10) are based on Spanish mission records in which the village affiliations of Gabrielino and other local groups were recorded with a -bit or -vit ending, which is the form used when describing a person's village of origin (e.g., people from Saangna are Saanbit, much as people from Los Angeles are Los Angelinos).

In the Kirkman-Harriman (Kirkman 1937) map (see Figure 11), modern place names predominate, and the emphasis is on depicting travel routes and battlefields. In all of these maps, there is no indication that the immediate vicinity of the Project supported a village-sized habitation.

Of note in the Johnston (1962) and Kirkman-Harriman (Kirkman 1937) maps is the depiction of a travel route running northwest–southeast directly adjacent to the Project location (see Figures 8 and 11). In both maps, the line indicates the route of Spanish conquistador and explorer Gaspar de Portolá’s 1769–1770 expedition into California. In the Project vicinity, the Portolá expedition followed an established trade and transportation route that formerly ran through the Cahuenga Pass to Yangna (Johnston 1962:121). The present-day alignment of U.S. Route 101 (Hollywood Freeway), which skirts the Project vicinity to the west, closely follows the course of the Native American route (see Figure 10).

SRI also reviewed historical maps of the region produced by the GLO, which depict old rancho boundaries, buildings, structures, roads, and natural features. Of particular interest are the numerous roads, creeks, and streams mapped in the vicinity of the Project on the 1873 GLO map of Township 1 South, Range 14 West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian (GLO 1873). Roughly 1 mile southeast of the Project, the 1873 GLO map depicts a creek emanating from “Two Springs” near a structure identified as “Sullivan’s house” (see Figure 5). A second creek is mapped between the Project and the springs, running roughly northwest–southeast from Section 12 to Section 13. West of the Project, two roads, identified as “Telegraph Road” and “Stage Road,” run northwest–southeast in roughly the same location and orientation as the former Native American route and the current Hollywood Freeway (see Figures 8 and 10). The Project itself is located within the former Rancho Los Felis, portions of which became the unincorporated community of Los Feliz in the city of Los Angeles.

The GLO map of Township 1 South, Range 14 West, San Bernardino Base and Meridian, completed in 1881, does not include all of the details of the earlier map, but it does have a new and unusual notation (GLO 1881). The 1881 map includes a small dot labeled “Old Mound” at the base of a canyon in the southwest corner of Section 3, roughly 2 miles (3.2 km) west-northwest of the Project. The “Old Mound” is in the vicinity of the historical Yamashiro House, built between 1911 and 1914 on a natural hillock. In some early American maps, the terms “mound” or “mounds” indicated prehistoric sites, although, in this case, “mound” may simply denote a natural rise.

Tribal Cultural Resources Search and Contact Program

The results of the tribal cultural resources search and Native American contact program are summarized below and are presented in Confidential Appendix B. The appendix includes copies of the NAHC request letter, the NAHC response letter, and an example of the follow-up letter sent to Native American groups and individuals, as well as logs of follow-up contacts, including phone conversations and e-mail correspondence.

On August 1, 2017, a letter describing the proposed Project was sent to the NAHC, and two maps depicting the Project location were provided. The letter requested a search of the SLF maintained by the NAHC and a list of Native American contacts with ancestral ties to the Project area. The NAHC responded in a letter e-mailed on August 4, 2017, which stated that their search of the SLF revealed no known Native American cultural resources within the Project area of potential effects. Contact information was provided for Native American tribal entities and individuals culturally affiliated with the Project area.

On August 11, 2017, letters were sent to the 10 contacts listed in the NAHC letter. On September 12, 2017, SRI placed a phone call to each of the contacts after receiving no responses to the letters. (Note: Although the NAHC letter indicated both Beverly Salazar and Beverly Folkes as contacts for the Fernandeño Tataviam Band of Mission Indians, these are, in fact, the same individual. Therefore, SRI placed nine phone calls in all [see Confidential Appendix B].) Four contacts representing Gabrielino/Tongva and Fernandeño Tataviam tribal groups indicated that they had ancestral ties to the Project vicinity and considered the area sensitive for cultural resources. Those tribes are the Gabrieleño/Tongva San Gabriel Band of Mission Indians, the Gabrieleño Band of Mission Indians–Kizh Nation, the Gabrielino Tongva Indians of California, and the Fernandeño Tataviam Band of Mission Indians. All recommended Native American monitoring during Project ground-disturbing activities. The listed tribes also requested that they be contacted with Project updates. Contacted individuals were informed that SRI's contact program was not part of or a substitute for formal government-to-government consultation with the City of Los Angeles concerning this Project. That consultation was managed by the DCP for the City of Los Angeles and is described in the next section.

City of Los Angeles Native American Consultation

On May 9, 2017, Mr. Andrew Salas, chairman of the Gabrieleño Band of Mission Indians–Kizh Nation (the Tribe), wrote a letter to Mr. Jon Chang of the City of Los Angeles DCP requesting consultation regarding the 5420 West Sunset Boulevard Hollywood project, pursuant to PRC Section 21080.3.1(d). Chairman Salas indicated that the project “lies within our ancestral tribal territory” and, further, that the “project is located within a sensitive area and may cause a substantial adverse change in the significance of our tribal cultural resources.” Additionally, Chairman Salas noted that tribal elders and tribal historians, as the experts on tribal history and custom, would be able to provide “a more complete history (both written and oral) regarding the location of historic villages, trade routes, cemeteries and sacred/religious sites in the project area.” A copy of this letter is included in Confidential Appendix C. No other requests for tribal consultation were received by the City of Los Angeles in connection with this Project.

On June 28, 2017, in response to Chairman Salas's letter, DCP staff convened formal consultation with the Tribe concerning four projects in the Hollywood area, including this Project, which was identified as the 5420 Sunset Boulevard Project. The consultation was held via teleconference and included members of DCP staff and representatives and staff from the Tribe including Chairman Salas; Mr. Matt Teutimez, a biologist; and Mr. Gary Stickel, an archaeologist. Jon Chang was identified as the DCP staff lead for the 5420 Sunset Boulevard Project (see notes from this consultation meeting in Confidential Appendix C).

After a brief discussion of the locations of the projects and their expected excavation depths, representatives from the Tribe provided a detailed discussion of the importance of the greater Hollywood area as an ecological “transition zone” containing springs and a variety of valuable ecological resources native to the mountains, foothills, and valleys. They also noted that an important trading route once ran through the Cahuenga Pass and along present-day Sunset Boulevard (see discussion of trade and transportation routes in the Ethnohistoric Archival Research section, above). The tribal archaeologist, Mr. Stickel, noted that the Gabrielino village of Maungna was located near the 5420 Sunset Boulevard Project; therefore, he suggested a 1-mile search radius for the archaeological records search conducted with the CHRIS (see Archaeological Records Search section, above). Mr. Stickel also noted that “artifacts could be found in the villages' service areas/secondary exploration areas,” including the Project area.

During the call, DCP staff and Tribe representatives reviewed the Kirkman-Harriman map (identified in the meeting notes as “1938 LA County Map”; see Figure 11). After the phone call, the Tribe provided three articles to DCP staff for further review: “Aboriginal Pathways and Trading Routes Were California's First Highways” (Day 2016), “The Lost Streams of Los Angeles” (Lewis 2006), and “Living on the Edge: Ecological and Cultural Edges as Sources of Diversity for Social-Ecological Resilience” (Turner, Davidson-Hunt and O'Flaherty 2003). Information in the forwarded articles, as appropriate, is incorporated into the background and archival research presented in this report. Tribe representatives did not identify any specific tribal cultural resources within the Project footprint, but they stated that “prior to AB 52, regulations were not in place that afforded them the opportunity to monitor private development” and, further, that construction workers typically are not trained to identify tribal cultural materials, which may be ephemeral or difficult to distinguish.

DCP staff ended the phone call and agreed to provide to the Tribe the following background documentation: SLF search results, CHRIS search results, the Natural History Museum report, the tribal cultural resources report, and any geotechnical reports. Of the requested materials, the SLF search, the CHRIS report, and the tribal cultural resources report are included as part of this document.

Conclusions

Ethnohistoric archival research, standard records searches with the CHRIS system and the NAHC, a limited Native American contact program, and formal tribal consultation conducted by DCP staff pursuant to PRC Section 21080.3.1(d) have identified no tribal cultural resources, as defined by PRC § 21074, within the Project footprint or the immediate vicinity. Nonetheless, the Native American representatives contacted for this study describe the Hollywood area as “sensitive” for cultural resources and stated that the area was “a dwelling place for our people” and important as an ecological “transition zone” (see Confidential Appendixes B and C). Although no named villages were recorded historically in the immediate Project area, notable settlements existed in the vicinity, as demonstrated by prehistoric site CA-LAN-1096 in Fern Dell Canyon, roughly 1 mile north of the Project. Nineteenth-century maps of the region indicate that the Project area was a hospitable habitation locale with reliable springs and streams during the ethnographic and late prehistoric periods.

Further, the underlying geology of the Project has the potential to contain unidentified tribal cultural resources, such as artifacts and archaeological deposits. The Project area is underlain by alluvial deposits dating to the late Pleistocene, which are sensitive for buried cultural deposits (see Figure 3). Geotechnical boring conducted for the Project encountered 3–6 feet (0.9–1.8 m) of fill below the parking-lot pavement and overlying the natural alluvium. This fill may have capped, and thus protected, prehistoric archaeological deposits of tribal concern. The geotechnical borings achieved depths of 35–65 feet (10.7–19.8 m) below surface, and none reached the base of the alluvial deposits. Therefore, proposed Project excavations of no more than 25 feet (7.6 m) below surface probably will impact only relatively recent alluvial deposits with the potential for archaeological deposits.

For projects where no specific tribal cultural resources are identified by Native American tribal representatives, the City of Los Angeles has developed a standard condition of approval (COA) to address the inadvertent discovery of previously undocumented tribal cultural resources. The text of this COA is presented in full in Appendix D.

AttachmentCondition of Approval - Tribal Cultural Resource Inadvertent Discovery

In the event that objects or artifacts that may be tribal cultural resources are encountered during the course of any ground disturbance activities¹, all such activities shall temporarily cease on the project site until the potential tribal cultural resources are properly assessed and addressed pursuant to the process set forth below:

- Upon a discovery of a potential tribal cultural resource, the project Permittee shall immediately stop all ground disturbance activities and contact the following: (1) all California Native American tribes that have informed the City they are traditionally and culturally affiliated with the geographic area of the proposed project; (2) and the Department of City Planning at (213) 978-1454.
- If the City determines, pursuant to Public Resources Code Section 21074 (a)(2), that the object or artifact appears to be tribal cultural resource, the City shall provide any effected tribe a reasonable period of time, not less than 14 days, to conduct a site visit and make recommendations to the Project permittee and the City regarding the monitoring of future ground disturbance activities, as well as the treatment and disposition of any discovered tribal cultural resources.
- The project Permittee shall implement the tribe's recommendations if a qualified archaeologist, retained by the City and paid for by the project Permittee, reasonably concludes that the tribe's recommendations are reasonable and feasible.
- The project Permittee shall submit a tribal cultural resource monitoring plan to the City that includes all recommendations from the City and any effected tribes that have been reviewed and determined by the qualified archaeologist to be reasonable and feasible. The project Permittee shall not be allowed to recommence ground disturbance activities until this plan is approved by the City.
- If the project Permittee does not accept a particular recommendation determined to be reasonable and feasible by the qualified archaeologist, the project Permittee may request mediation by a mediator agreed to by the Permittee and the City who has the requisite professional qualifications and experience to mediate such a dispute. The project Permittee shall pay any costs associated with the mediation.
- The project Permittee may recommence ground disturbance activities outside of a specified radius of the discovery site, so long as this radius has been reviewed by the qualified archaeologist and determined to be reasonable and appropriate.
- Copies of any subsequent prehistoric archaeological study, tribal cultural resources study or report, detailing the nature of any significant tribal cultural resources, remedial actions taken, and disposition of any significant tribal cultural resources shall be submitted to the South Central Coastal Information Center (SCCIC) at California State University, Fullerton.
- Notwithstanding the above, any information determined to be confidential in nature, by the City Attorney's office, shall be excluded from submission to the SCCIC or the general public under the applicable provisions of the California Public Records Act, California Public Resources Code, and shall comply with the City's AB 52 Confidentiality Protocols.
